About the Report

This review focuses on the needs of rural women extracted from secondary sources, with reference to their role in the agrarian and non-agrarian economy, their relationship to their environment; the sanitation, health and education facilities available to them, and what strategic inputs must be made to improve their overall condition and status in Pakistan society.

The review starts from the situation of the girl child in Pakistan and moves on to highlighted key aspects of the gender gap that exists. The review examines critical aspects that impact on the lives of women, children and men in the country.

A significant gender gap exists in health and education status, in earned income shares, in non-agricultural occupational categories and in political participation.
