Foreword

This Index of Sources for Research on Women's Issues in Pakistan was painstakingly prepared by Arif Hasan, Mansoor Raza and Hamza Arif and was offered to Aurat Foundation for publication. Subsequently, Khadija Laghari, researcher at The Pakistan Institute of International Affairs and Aurat Foundation enlarged and edited the text. It is an invaluable addition to the literature for research on women's issues in Pakistan and a commendable initiative taken by Arif Hasan and his colleagues.

The Index makes available for researchers and all those interested in women's and gender issues access to sources in various categories. It includes official statistics on population, employment, labour force and education and contains a comprehensive list of laws related to women's rights in Pakistan, both federal and provincial, as well as a list of organizations working for women's welfare and empowerment and gendered statistics from the Election Commission of Pakistan. Of special interest to the reader would be details of research papers published on women's issues and news items about protests launched by women on political and social matters and on voting rights.

Facilitating women to access knowledge and resources is a fundamental goal of Aurat Foundation for which it has established a country-wide network. Since its inception in 1986, Aurat Foundation has maintained a vigorous publications programme and has documented all its advocacy and empowerment efforts for women. It has been a pioneer in lobbying for pro-women legislation both at the grassroots level and with governments and members of the national and provincial assemblies. It has also disseminated information and data about affirmative action and women friendly laws in order to raise awareness about the existence of these laws. Hence, the present publication is a natural component of its charter.

Although this publication does not claim to be a complete database for research on women's issues in Pakistan, it provides ready reference and endeavours to fill gaps in much needed information.
