Aurat Foundation has demanded the formation of a judicial commission to conduct a transparent, impartial and effective investigation into the killing of renowned Pakistani television anchor and journalist Rabia Ahsan, expressing deep grief and outrage over her death under allegedly mysterious and suspicious circumstances.

In a statement, the organisation extended its heartfelt condolences and solidarity to Ahsan's daughters, family members, relatives and the journalistic community, describing her death as a major tragedy for journalists and society.

The foundation called on the government to establish a judicial commission to investigate the circumstances surrounding her killing and ensure that those responsible are brought to justice in accordance with the law.

It also demanded that the commission be given a clear mandate to complete its investigation within one month, stressing that timely justice is essential not only for the affected family but also for protecting women and upholding the rule of law.

Aurat Foundation warned that delays in delivering justice and compromises in cases involving violence against women could increase public frustration and embolden perpetrators.

Referring to previous cases of violence against women, the organisation cited the murder of Noor Mukadam in Islamabad and cases involving Hina Javed, Hina Zarif, Ayesha and Rabia Ahsan as examples highlighting the need for effective accountability and timely justice.

The foundation also urged federal and provincial commissions working for women's rights to take notice of the situation and fulfil their constitutional responsibilities.

It emphasised that domestic violence and violence against women must not be dismissed as private or family matters, adding that such incidents require serious attention from the government and law enforcement agencies.

Aurat Foundation appealed to the media, civil society and all segments of society to make the prevention of domestic violence and violence against women a national priority.

The organisation stressed that the government and relevant institutions must work together to create a society where every child, citizen, elderly person and woman can live with dignity, freedom and security, regardless of whether they are journalists, students, working women or homemakers.

"Women's safety will become a reality only when their voices, freedom and lives are protected," the statement concluded.
